

Nextel Cup top drivers

■ Sizing up points leaders on the way to Darlington, S.C., 6C

NO. 1 IN THE USA

■ 'Idol' voters pull plug on Chris, 3A

By Thomas Cooper, Getty Images

Oprah's pulpit

■ Talk-show host emerges as a 'hip and materialistic Mother Teresa' for USA, 1D

Winfrey: "Self-righteous attack dog" for some.

NSA has massive database of Americans' phone calls

'Push presents': A trend is born

Sure, Everymom gets her due come May 14. But it's the newest moms who are really cashing in. Post-delivery room, dads are being nudged to give "push presents," largely lavish gifts that reward wives for their delivery-room derring-do. USA TODAY's Olivia Barker charts the other fruits of labor, from the blingy to the banal.

Diamonds are a mom's best friend ...

Banish the thought of baby bootie charms, Dad. Mom wants a diamond-flanked sapphire ring — blue for boys, pink for girls. Celebrities are taking note: Pierce Brosnan gave wife Keely three diamond and gold bracelets — and a two-week trip to Bora Bora — after the birth of their son Paris. At Burdeen's Jewelry in affluent Buffalo Grove, Ill., they're selling stackable rings and diamond pendants, "sophisticated, timeless pieces" that, ranging from $400 to $10,000, are "substantial," says Jason Burdeen, who co-runs the family business. The mother-to-be can even register for a wish list of items for her husband to pick from.

Burdeen's Jewelry

Suri diamond earrings: From Burdeen's, $2,280.